

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

Showers of sleet and snow are expected to become more numerous across southeast England during Wednesday evening, although any accumulations of snow are likely to be restricted to vegetated surfaces at first. The showers will tend to fade for a while during the early hours of Thursday with a risk of icy patches forming on untreated surfaces. Further sleet and snow showers are likely during Thursday, with the possibility of a few heavier ones developing in a line from north Kent to West Sussex around dawn, which could produce 1-3 cm of snow in a few places.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 22:00 on Wed, 03rd Apr 2013 until 08:00 on Thu, 04th Apr 2013

Icy patches may form on untreated surfaces left wet by earlier sleet and snow showers. Further snow showers are likely later on Wednesday night which could give a slight covering of snow in places, particularly over hills.

The public are advised to take extra care and be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel.
